

NOISY DELEGATES GET A SCOLDING AT CLUB FEDERATION

Mrs. Pennybacker, the President, Has a Hard Time Keeping Order.

"When you hear my gavel it means sit down where you are without taking one other step. If you can't hear, sit and think. Some of the world's greatest achievements have been accomplished that way. If the ushers can't make the delegates obey and sit down, let them resign and we'll get other ushers who will enforce the rules." It was thus, aided by a formidable gavel and a determined voice, that Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker sought to control the session of the thirteenth biennial convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs, over which she presided in the Seventh Regiment Armory. And it was not until she had used her gavel a great many times and shown her determination to keep things well in hand that she got anything like order out of the meeting.

First of all, she had the doors of the armory closed at 9:30 o'clock, the time for calling the convention to order, and those who were tardy were locked out for at least an hour. These belated ones fairly stormed the Lexington Avenue entrances of the armory, and there was so much pushing and struggling to get in that Miss Mary Garrett Hay had to beseech the delegates to be a little more gentle with their sisters.

NOISY DELEGATES DROWN VOICES OF THE SPEAKERS. With the opening of the morning session it was found that no matter how the speakers raised their voices, the delegates in the rear of the hall could not hear, so Miss Hay, who is one of the directors, announced that to-morrow morning's session would be held in Carnegie Hall. There, she said, the New York delegation would, out of courtesy to the visitors, take seats in the gallery and leave the floor to the others.

When the convention was called to order, Tall Eben Morgan, the musical director, announced that Hymn No. 9 would be sung, but Mrs. Pennybacker evidently overruled him, for when she took her place four female cornettists sprang up and started the "Soldiers' Chorus" from Faust. After that came the "Star Spangled Banner" and No. 9 was forgotten.

The President made it quite clear that she would stand no disobedience from the delegates, and she kept a mighty watchful eye over the assembly while Mrs. D. I. Murray of Ohio, Chairman of the Credentials Committee, announced that 2,144 delegates had registered. As soon as Mrs. Murray had finished Mrs. Pennybacker said, with a few more bangs of her gavel:

"I have just seen three ushers delivering notes. That is against the rules unless the notes are of the most vital importance. And the lady (Bang-bang!) who is delivering the notes is not paying the least attention to the chair! If this is not stopped the Hisnial Board will appoint other ushers!"

When order was restored Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles of Los Angeles, one of the candidates to succeed Mrs. Pennybacker, made a report as Chairman of the Rules and Regulations Committee. She was well applauded.

Miss Hay followed with a report for the Biennial Convention Committee, and then it came to Mrs. Pennybacker's ears that a long line of delegates was trying to get into the armory.

"There should have been on time," she said. "We'll have three other reports read before admitting them." "Oh, let them in now," Miss Hay pleaded. But Mrs. Pennybacker shook her head and said "No!" with marked emphasis.

LET THE TARDY ONES IN AFTER SHORT WAIT. However, she relented a minute later. "Mrs. William Grant Brown tells me," she said, "that the fire laws will not permit the women to stand out in the open air, so we'll have the door opened for a little while."

With the influx of delegates, many of whom seemed to have been much ruffled by being locked out, Mrs. Pennybacker had her trouble all over again, and she and her gavel spent a bad quarter hour getting order.

"Ushers, you'll have to resign if you can't make the delegates sit down where they are. And stop whispering. Sit and think if you can't hear!"

There was a recess a little later and at its close, when Mrs. Pennybacker thumped her gavel again, the delegates scampered to their seats like frightened rabbits.

"Oh, you're doing much better!" cried the presiding officer. Then came the announcement about the change to Carnegie Hall for to-morrow morning's session.

"Where is Carnegie Hall?" one of the delegates cried. "Ask a policeman," replied the chair.

Other reports were read and then the session closed with the reading of Mrs. Pennybacker's report. In it she urged the federation to join the International Council of Women, to carry on its rural work, to hold a Pan-American congress in 1920, and ask the Government to help finance it—and to continue its work of Americanizing the immigrant.

The session this afternoon included a press conference, a business session and a library consultation in the armory library.

Four Miners Buried to Death. RENO, Nev., May 25.—Four miners were buried to death and heavy damage was done in the old Belcher workings of the Yellow Jacket mine at Gold Hill, adjoining Virginia City. It was on the 1,400-foot level Tuesday. It was still burning at noon yesterday. It was blowing out.

COURT SITS TO HEAR OF RACIAL PREJUDICE IN NATIONAL GUARD

Counsel for Max J. Klein, the Complainant, Gets an Extension of Time.

An inquiry to determine whether there is racial discrimination against Jews in the National Guard was begun to-day before Adj. Gen. Louis Stotesbury in the State Arsenal. Complaint had been made to Gov. Whitman by Max J. Klein of No. 948 Union Avenue, the Bronx, against Capt. Howard E. Sullivan of Battalion D, Second Field Artillery. Before any testimony had been taken the inquiry was adjourned to May 31.

This morning's session was a public one, as all future sessions will be. Those were present Major Gen. John P. O'Ryan, Col. George A. Wingate, Capt. Sullivan, Max J. Klein, Charles E. Klein, counsel for Max, and Maurice Simmons, counsel for Klein.

Mr. Simmons explained that he was not yet ready to call his witnesses, of whom he said he had several. "I purpose applying to the Governor so that the scope of this inquiry will be enlarged," he said.

Gen. Stotesbury replied: "It is not my purpose to limit this hearing. I am authorized to receive any testimony you may submit. I think we ought to proceed, since the affidavit presented here has established a prima facie case of discrimination."

Gen. O'Ryan asked: "Why can we not proceed with this witness, Mr. Klein?"

"As the representative of one million taxpayers in this city who are vitally interested in the outcome of this investigation I would be doing them a great injustice to proceed precipitately," said Mr. Simmons.

LAME, HE HIT BLIND MAN.

Strike Picket, Found Guilty, Says He Thought Victim Planned Attack.

William Walker of No. 85 Wyckoff Street, Brooklyn, who is lame, was found guilty to-day in General Sessions, Brooklyn, of an assault on Abraham Kawan of No. 275 Atlantic Avenue, who is blind. The testimony showed that Walker on April 15, while acting as a picket for strikers in Robbins dry docks, saw Kawan approaching, feeling his way along with a heavy cane, and the blind man was a strike breaker and hit him on the head with a club.
